On the 26th of July 2009, the Anna Lindh Foundation officially announced the Movement "Combatants for Peace" winner of the Euromed Award for Dialogue between Cultures 2009. "Combatants for Peace" is a civil movement jointly established by Palestinian and Israeli individuals. The Award, which is bestowed and voted on by the members of the Anna Lindh Foundation's networks of civil society present in forty-three countries, recognizes this year the contribution of organizations and individuals in promoting a culture of peace and coexistence in the Euro-Mediterranean Region .

The Fourth Edition of the Euro-Med Award for Dialogue between Cultures, an initiative of the Anna Lindh Foundation and its partner Fondazione Mediterraneo, was launched back in March 2009 in the framework of the Regional Initiative Restore Trust Rebuild Bridges, with nominations received from civil society organizations across the Region. Members of the Anna Lindh Foundation region-wide network, totalling over 2800 civil society organisations, participated in electing this year winner, Combatants for Peace .

The announcement of the winner has been reported in 4 news agencies and 14 printed and online newspapers in the region.
